It will not be replied here that Congres. pay well sit, it if has a quarum, because the power to transact business residing in a worum rests upon the fact that all the members have access to the meeting, and are present, though not within the chamber-at least constructively present. It will not be denied that if a mere quorum were to lar out the rest of the members, and legislate in their forced absence, its action would be revolutionary. What is true of a quorum is true of any number less than the whole. Here is a quorus barring a large number of the representaves. Here is revolutionary action.

The Police Commissioners' Board, who hold their meetings every Wednesday evening for the regulation of all matters appertaining to the police, and for the trial of delinquent officers of the force, sometimes offer to the public some spicy scenes. Mayor Mauroc is ex-office President of the Board, the balance of whom, five in number, are appointed by the Gov. crosity which well became the winning party in the controversy, went lack at once to the fountain head of French and American sympathies. To such a speech there could be but one reply, and that the Emperor Napoleon did not fail to make. The historical reminiscenses, he said, which had just been evoked were a sure gnaranty that no misunderstanding could desturb the amicable relations which had so long existed between France and ernor, and represent all stripes of polities. One of the number. Mr. Soule, is a son of Hon. Pierre Soule, while another, the American Union. Nothing more was needed. It was felt on both sides that this interchange of friendly sentiments had sufficient to make the reconciliation complete, and restore the intercourse be-teen the two countries to its old boting. It is worthy of remark, however, that the same number of the Moniteur which publishes the official account of the above interview takes the opportunity to deny in a marked manner that the French Government had "even had any howledge" (that is any office had any howledge) that is any office knowledge) "of the dispatch addressed by purpose, and in reply to an assertion of one of the Board. Mr. Duvigueand, that he,the Mayor, had no vote in its measures, his reply was: "I want you to understand, Ir. Seward to Mr. Bigelow on the 23d No comber." I think it only fair to say that Mr. Seward to Mr. Bigelow on the 23d November." I think it only fair to say that something is due, perhaps, to the discretion of Mr. Bigelow, who by not communicating that dispatch enabled the French Government to decline all official knowledge of it, and thereby probably contributed materially to the harmony of the above interview and the successful debut of his successor. Then again, one of the members took the liberty of dubbing Mr. Lynch the Robespierre of the Board, who, in turn, reterted by applying the name of Marat to the speaker. The last move is to summon Col. Adams, the Chief of Police, before them, and to rompel him to wear the regular uniform. This, Mr. Moaroe, in his espacity as Mayor, denies their right to do, and hints at resistance. Nous vertons.

The appeintment was made by the former, and duly sent up for conformation. But what next? Alas! for those who play a double game—we cannot serve God and mammon. One day it happened that Thad was at the White House, and in his conversation with the President, the subject of Louisiana politics came up, Mr. Johnsou remarking with considerable satisfaction that "anyhow, Governor Wells was a vestigation of the case, and from all the testimony that could be developed on the trial am satisfied that he was killed with-out any eanse whatever, either to justify or mitigate the offence. Thad Stevens glanced over the sheet, and a grim smile stole over his face as the truth dawned upon him. Quietly drawing from his pocket the other letter of the Governor, te handed it to the President. "There; read that, sir, if you please." It is suffi-cent to say that the amountment has not replied that he was man enough for him or any other man in town, and that he (Fuller) had been acting the G-d d-d dog ever since he had been there. This Fuller denied by telling him, as a man naturally would, that he was a liar. The intimate relations of blood, language and sympathy existing between this city and Paris contribute largely to make the repeating what he had said, Fuller rose to his feet and pushed him off, using no more force than necessary. The young man, having come close up to him, Hord shot him. He fired two shots. I do not know whether they both took effect or not, as the testimony of the two physicians that were examined on the trial was contrary to each other. Fuller never showed any disposition to do Hord any bodily injury that I could see from the testimony, and none resulted in the blow or push which he received. It so happened, however, that this distant and improbable contingency actually occurred. Mr. Smithson died at Genoa, in Italy, in 1829 leaving property to the amount of £120,000 sterling. His nephew died without issue, five or six years after, at Pisa. The United States were then for the first time notified of the bequest which had fallen to them, and Congress immedi ately passed a law authorizing the Presi dent to appoint an agent to apply to the English Court of Chancery, for the real and personal estate of James Smithson pledging the faith of the Government for the application of the fund to the pur-poses specified. LOOK AFTERTHE LADS.—The following remarks are from the Chicago Journal of Commerce: In our cities, where trade drives and is enacting, and where amuse-ments and fashion hold such despotic sway, this evil-for it is an evil-of absenteeism from parental and maternal du-tics is a growing one, and threatens to injure both individuals and society mor than we may expect. Hurried life too exclusively confined to the counting-room; life with the crowd in the boarding-house or the hotel life that is restless and gay to the verge of distration, this sort of life with its obviously demoralizing effects up ou America in its 'teens, is quite too co mon. It is, therefore, very desirable for the rich as well as the poor that well ordered family living should not pass away, and that the intercourse and association between parents and their children should become less intermittent and closer. Of what advantage will it be to make a fortune for oue's heirs and to seat them in luxury, if, meanwhile, they are left without careful watching, without special and solicitous care for their moral training—a watching and care that cannot be safely intrusted hirelings? Downtall of Stephens It is only a little while since the long-aired, broad-collared, and erratic O'Mahaired, broast-collared, and erratic O'Mahony was at the top wave of Fenian popularity. His imperial tread was smothered in the pile of soft carpets. The musical popping of champagne corks beguiled his mignty intellect, and the aromatic perfirme of choicest Havanas mingled with the pangent flavor of Green Saal and I pon the decision of o Mahony, Mr.

J mes Stephens made his appearance upon the scene. There was a certain romance about this man. He had rallied the clans in his native land. He had bearded the British lion in his den. He had enjoyed the felicity of being locked up in a Dabliu fail for treason—escaping under circumstances of the most simular up in a Dabliu jail for treason—escaping under circumstances of the most singular character. He boasted that England had not bolts and bars strong enough to detain him, and declared that he had but to stamp his foot upon the ground, and fifty thousand men would answer to his call. The Fenians, disorganized and comparatively broken, wanted a leader of some sort, and Stephens seemed just the personage to meet the emerginer.

Sonage to meet the emerg ney.

The more pariotic of the clans rallied around him. He became a hero instanter.

Crowds to the extent of tens of thousands Crowds to the extent of tens of thousands assembled to listen to his speeches, and applanded them to the echo. His progress from city to city was a continuous triumphal march. Everywhere he was welcomed by committees of his admiring countrymen, feasted, toasted, showered with Lonquets, and exalted into a very demi-god by his unreasoning and imaginative compatitiots. The minutest incidents of his daily conduct, and the most trifling peculiarities of his personal appearance became subjects of general comment, and the indefatigable army of newspaper reporters put these on record, as if they felt that an anxious public was wanting with breathless expectancy to know when Stephens sneezed.

ing with breathless expectancy to know when Stephens sneezed.

The Great C. O. I. R. set his mark high. He announced himself a real prophet of deliverance—the One who should come to redeem Erin, to break the bonds of the captive and set the prisoner free, to remedy all the mistakes of his predecessors, to push down the millars of littlish deminer. dy all the mistakes of his predecessors, to push down the pillars of British domination. There was something sublimely ridienlons in the cool effrontery with which he stated his designs and his ability to carry them into effect. He had all freamed organized into military districts. He needed but to speak the word, and a dozen firitish regiments would lay down their arms, while a hundred thousand patriots would rush to the field. He only awaited the ripening of his own plans and the heur of his own convenience to throw himself upon the Irish coast and take the lead of a revolutionary body that could not be successfully resisted. To all this balderdash his confiding countrymen listened with open mouths, and in the simplicity of their souls believed it true. And when Stephens finally annonaced the period of climax, and proctaimed that the decisive blow should be struck before the

Consequently, the latest announcement is that Stephens has resigned his high office as President of a Republic that never had existence, and is now basily engaged in changing his board-ing place about three times a week, to es-cape the observation of the maddened

Stephens now gives his opinion what sensible men have all along seen—that any attempt to liberate Ireland by a revolutionary uprising like that of the Feniana must necessarily result in failure. His successor, Gleason, attributes this conclusion to cowardice. Whatever may be also source it represents sound visabon and clusion to cowardice. Whatever may be its source, it represents sound wisdom and good indgment, and it does seem that every Irishman who can compute that two and two make four onght to be satisfied of that fact by this time. The Fenian movement has been nothing but a series of Quixotisms and blunders, and its history will never be fully and properly written until some Cervantes or Butler shall arise, capable of appreciating and exhibiting its ridiculous tailnres. O'Mahony is an addle-pated egotistical fool. Roberts is an addle-pated egotistical fool. Roberts is a fuss-and-feathers nobody. And Stephens when we compare his past and present dewhen we compare his past and present de-clarations, cannot avoid the conclusion that he has a good deal of knavery mixed up with a deal more of bombast in his composition. In short, the only half-way decent or relieving feature in the whole business, is the misdirected but self-sacri-ficing zeal of the poor fellows who are now looking upon the world through the bars of Canadian prisons. And we fancy that it will not serve to mitigate the bur-dens of their confinement, when they re-flect that they have been made the dupes fleet that they have been made the dapes of seoundrels or lunatics, under whose in spiration they undertook an enterpris hat was no more sensible than a rail that was no more sensible than a raid upon the moon would be.

We hope that Irishmen will now be satisfied of the perfect slucerity and true friendship of those who from the begianing warned them of the certain failure of the Fenian scheme. If Stephens newer told the truth before, he tells it now, when he says that Ireland cannot possibly be ibberated by revolution. It is said that his countrymen threaten to hang him for making this assertion. They will show more wisdom by accepting the facts of the situation with the best possible grace, and acknowledging the grand "sell" with and acknowledging the grand "sell" with as much good humor as they can muster.

THE CITY OF MEWS AND PURES. - Alex-The CITY OF MANS AND FURBS.— Alexandria, Va., is said to have more cats than any other city of the United States. This is the way it came about: Some years ago a youngster of that city, wishing to have some fun, went through the market and privately engaged each market man from the country to bring a cat next day, as he said he wanted a good mouser. Every country house has a superfluity of cats, so the next morning each market cart carried a tom cat into town. The joker did not make his appearance of course, and the market men, after waiting for him until they were ready to go home, indignantly turned all the cats loose in the market house. Such a caterwauling as was heard that night was never heard before in the quiet streets of Alexandria. The cats lived on the offal of the market house, and grew and multiplied until Alexandria became as famous for cats as

DOUBLE ELOPEMENT.

Our Edgefield neighbors have recently een favored with a sensation not less racy than startling, in the shape of nothing less than a double elopement. The see, have been living at Hicks's old brick yard in Lower EdgeSeld. The family consisted of Mr. Riddle, his wife, a little son of Mrs. R by a former marriage, and a young lady whose name we were not able to ascertain. Here comes in the inevitable young gentleman. His name was Harris, and his visits were frequent. Hav-Frest Indianapolis, Chicago, and third Checimand. 2:00 M. Second Indianapolis, Chicago, and Cincinnati. 2:00 M. Second Cincinnati. 3:00 P. Last Sunday week Harris and Lambert went to Riddle's house in company. Their errand was a sinister one. They went to tear Mrs. R. from the embrace of her unsuspecting husband; and so the sniekered at the idea - twas a good joke. But when he noticed the firm compression of Lambert's lip and the ominous glitter of Harris's eye-when Lambert growled out from between his teeth, in the most approved melo-dramatic style, that they had come for Mrs. Riddle, and were going to have her, and that if he made any resistance they would "decapitate" him in the shake of a sheep's tail-Riddle realized the intensity of the crisis. and sprang to the bed for his pistol The charges had been drawn. There was a 'traitor in the camp." Riddle was betrayed. At this juncture, Harris, who was heavy on the muscle, seized and ticd bim fast. Forth came the recreant wife and undid him with four brief words, "It is too true." With imperturbable A farmer named Christopher Makin, residing at Vermont, Wla., was run over and killed by a freight train Tuesday night. to revelations, which filled the soul of Riddle with any amount of uncomfortable emotion. In the first place, arrangements for the elopement had been systematically concluded. She was "bound" to go with Lambert, and the young lady (name unknown) was bound to go with Harris. The affliction was certainly a "hard one" for the "old man," but she considerately hoped that he would "grin and bear it." Lambert had given her "something to make her love him" -some sweet oblivious antidote-and that was the long and short of it. She had in fact been a perfect stranger to love until she met Lambert, and it would be very ungenerous of Riddle to stand in the way of her happiness. The least thing he could do for all concerned was to let her depart in Strange to say, this singular plea "set Riddle," as our informant states, "to thiuking." Such an aggregation of domestie calamity at such short notice paralyzed, as it were, his powers of action. So he took a seat, utterly subdued, and while he was groping in the dim recesses of his mind for relief from this great sorrow of his life, morning came, and with it the express-wagon which was to bear away Mrs. R. and her luggage. Riddle aronsed himself; he made a last appeal to his levanting better-half, without avail. Lambert's love potion was still in "successful operation." Seating herself on an ancient cedar chest-the gift of her first husband-she waved adien with a yellow bandana pocket handkerchief until lost by distance to the tear-dimmed vision of her deserted apouse.

At last accounts Mrs. Riddle, Lambert, Harris, and the "young lady" had embarked for Cairo, en route, as is supposed, for Missouri, where a brother of Mrs. R.

That husbands are false and that women are frail, Or that men with each other's wives meddle. Is a truth we'll admit—though the wife in this Tale Is an incomprehensible Riddle.

The Professor first entered into an able dissertation on the nature and laws of matter, and its unlimited existence so far as the universe extended-that there were but two simple things which existed throughout the world of which we are eognizant by observation or reflection, revealed by actual experiments on earth, or demonstrated by the researches of mathematies and astronomy-these two things were force and matter. Matter which exists everywhere and the force which controls it and eauses it to move. He said that motion was a principle co extensive with matter, and though unseen iu matter apparently inert, was yet ever present and at work. He instanced a small bar of lead which he held in his hand, and he said: There is apparently no notion in this, but yet there is an unseen motion constantly going on in it-causing its particles to be mutually attracted and expelled-affected incessantly by changes of temperature and therefore forever in motion, though uuseen aud unobserved by as it were more directly to our the human eye. He spoke of certain attention, and by personal representation, properties inseparable from matter and uherent iu it, such as extension, or length, breadth and thickness, and the great law of its existence, which renders it imposssible for two bodies to occupy the same given space at one and the same time. And he said that motion seemed to be the house properly sustained, may be the ladsoul of inorganic bodies, as life was the der for some poor soul between the grogsoul of animate bodies. He said sliop and the church. Let our people that all bodies were subject to two sorts of changes-physical and chemical, and that whether it be not better often to bring on these were dependent all the phenomena of the material universe-the one affecting change of position, the other of component parts. He instanced physical change by letting fall from his hand a piece of crystal, which changed its posiion by falling from his hand to the floor y the force of gravity, but maintained he same form which it held while in his and; but he showed the force of chemieal change when on applying the end of glass rod dipped in sulphurie acid to a mall quantity of salts of potassium and common white sugar that these compoment parts were instantly changed, the seemed by Fire—Terenty two Persons Burned to Death!—We are called upon to record one of the most horrifying and melancholy accidents which has ever ocurred within the limits of this State Though an accident which no caution or foresight could avoid, it will send a thrill of horror throughout the whole country. On the evening of the 7th instant, between hours of 8 and 9 P. M., the occupant ie jail heard, very suddenly, a rum of the jail heard, very suddenly, a rum-bling noise in the upper stories of the jail as if the iron grates were being shaken, and immediately followed the cry of fire; he rushed from his room to ascertain whether the jail was on fire or not, and after walking around the jail he observed a little smoke issuing from one of the a little smoke issuing from one of the windows on the third floor his next object windows on the third floor his next object was to open the prison door and extinguish it, but remembering that Mr. Barineau, who was living several hundred yards from the jail, had the keys in his possession, he (the occupant of the jail) immediately dispatched a messenger for him. Mr. Barineau, accompanied by the sheriff, were soon at the jail; in the meanime however numbers of persons had sheriff, were soon at the jail; in the mean-time, however, numbers of persons had collected. The fire, apparently, at this time had not made as rapid progress as was shown in a few minutes, although a dense emoke was issuing from every win-dow. The sheriff, with the assistance of nearly all the citizens of the village, and the garrison at this place, immediately the garrison at this place, immediately took the most active measures to save. If possible, the unfortunate inmates. The door on the basement was opened, but the dense and suffocating smoke prevented any one from rescuing those who occupied the third story. As a last resort, strenuous efforts were then made, with the assistance of helders. tance of ladders, to remove the grating from one of the windows, which proved effectual. At this time the cries and effectual. At this time the cries and screams of the suffering inmates were heart-reading. The jail was in flames and twenty-two human beings were being burnt to death without any possible relief. Iluman agency could effect nothing, every effort was made to reacue them which could be suggested, but all to no purpose: the devouring flames soon consumed them, and in the charred ruins is only to orrible as the accident may be, and as much as it may be regretted, a consolation follows of having done our duty to the best of our abilities, and that accident is con-fined to no place or order of circumstances. With us rests the duty, but the result with

With its rests the duty, but the result with God.

At the time the jail canght fire there were in it twenty-three prisoners. Twenty-two negroes were confined in the upper cells on the third floor, among whom were three women. On the second story Robert A. Flinn, a white man, was confined on bail process. Mr. M. F. McBride, by great daring, rushed to Mr. Flinn's room, which was the first one at the head of the stairway, and unlocked the door, he thereby making his sescape. Mr. McBride deserves the highest credit, but in his attempt to save the prisoner he came night losing his own life. He fell twice by suffocation before he reached the foot of the staircase. Where every one did so well it would be wrong to make invidious distinctions, but we cannot withhold our meed of praise of the superhuman efforts of Lieutenant Ross, private Wm. Green (who mounted a ladder at the most perilous crisis, and ascended to a window on the third story,) Sheriff Matthews, Mr. Beck, Joe and William Blakely (colored) particularly carling by the story of the superhead as the story of the story of the superhead as the superh tiam Blakely, (colored,) particularly excited our commendation.

As to the origin of this fire we can only conjecture. Whether it was accidental or conjecture. Whether it was accidental or designed by the prisoners, for the purpose of making their escape, is one of those mysteries that will remain unexplained. A jury of inquest is now sitting for the investigation of the whole matter; but up to time of going to press they have not rendered their verdict.—Kingston(S. C.) Star.

The Coal and Iron of the Kentucky River Valley - Extension of Slack Water Navigation.

There is a growing conviction, among the thinking men of our State, that the future of Kentucky is to be made prosperous, by a judicious development of her mitting and manufacturing resources. Very many look forward to the day when our rugged mountains will swarm with a thrifty and prosperous population of miners and furness men to feed when thrifty and prosperous population of miners and turnace men to feed whom every acre of our fertile lowlands will be brought under careful and profitable cul-

It is nunceessary to argue how desirable is such a condition of things, and how beneficial it would react on every citizen of the State, he he farmer, mechanic, or professional man. We merely propose exhibiting a few official statistics, to show how truly composed in all the statistics. how truly economical it will be to develop, even at heavy cost, the rich deposits of the Upper Kentacky Valley.

We have always held that a niggardly seconomy in public affine as a content in the content in the seconomy in public affine as a content in the seconomy in t live and have always believed, that a large outlay of public money may some-times be a measure of the wisest and Classet even my and have even held in contempt the false doctrine of those would-be patricts, who think it a public sin to alstract even one dollar from the public treasury, for the encouragement a Legislator in keeping an Argus eye on the public funds.

The new order of things brought about by the war will, of necessity, bring about many changes in business and in domestic affairs. Be these changes pleasant or disagreeable, profitable or disadvantageous, they must still be met, and public and private plans modelled to suit them. The era of small farms, a denser population, manufacturing enterprise, and energetic development of all the wealth we have within our borders, is upon us. Our Legislators and our citizens must recognize the fact, and act upon it, if they would not be outstripped by other and would not be outstripped by other and would not be outstrapped by other and more practical communities. Our lands must be thoroughly tilled, or we become pignics beside agricultural Illinois; our number must be brought to market, or we must look to Wisconsin for our building materials; and, unless we can arrange for some cheen and playtiful products of some cheap and plentiful production of coal, iron, and lead, we can never, by any possibility, compete with Pennsylvania or

We advocate an immediate and thor convinced that the first step toward a mineral importance is to be taken in that direction. We do not mean that the improvement should be undertaken by the State: but propose to show briefly that liberal and efficient State aid can be safely and profitably given.

In the present article we shall consider only the probable effect of river improvement on five counties bordering on the Kentucky river: Estill, Owsley, Clay, Breathitt, and Perry. The counties from Madison to Carroll, inclusive, may be considered, for the present, as strictly agri-cultural, and to be benefited only by reflux influence from the counties named. It is, influence from the counties named. It is, perhaps, the case that in the agricultural counties, properly so called—as Woodford, Mercer, &c.—lands have nearly if not quite, reached their maximum value. Those counties, having been long settled, have been to a great extent denuded of timber, and in them lands are held at prices not to be paid but by the most trugal and expert farmer. The competition of newer States and Territories will always fix a maximum value on purely agricultural lands. With mineral and timbered lands the case is widely different. At present there is, in Kentucky, only a nominal value affixed to lands exclusively mineral. They have never been developed, nor a cheap and expeditious developed nor a cheap and expeditions highway to market provided. Facilities for safe transportation must be assured before capital and labor will seek our mineral lands.

As is well known, the counties of Estill, Owsley, Clay, Breathitt, and Perry arc, as compared with the Blue Grass and Green River counties, of but little agricultural value. But they teem with iron, coal, salt, and timber. They sustain a sparse population of frugul, hardy, and poor mountainneers. But within their boundaries is a mass of nawrought wealth sufficients. mountaineers. But within their boundaries is a mass of nnwrought wealth sufficient to employ hundreds of thousands of busy and thrifty operatives. Let the resources of these five counties (and they are but an item of our mineral wealth) be assured a 'highway, and a change, as striking as it will be beneficial, will follow. The mineral lands now rated at a mere trifle will assume a proper valuation, the trifle will assume a proper valuation, the appreciate with increase of population, espital will seek profitable investments, and a stream of industrious population be directed toward- those now thinly settled

The following table of land valuatious is from the Auditor's Report for 1-53, and will show the basis of our calculations. That year is selected as exhibiting the most flattering returns from the coun-

Showing an area of a milliou and a third acres, valued, on an average, at searcely system.

It is reported that the war office has been tendered to Mr. Cowan.

This vast body of mineral land, comprising more than one-twentieth part of the croire area of the State, paid into the State Treasury in 1859 but $9,119 75, or less than one one-hundredth part of the receiver for that year. revenue for that year. Surely this state of case can be improved, and, if improvenuent is possible, it is peremptorily demanded by every consideration of public

The data from which the appreciation of mineral lands may be estimated are not to obscure or inaccessible as many per-sons suppose. The coal and iron fields of ennsylvania are cases in point. We take it for grauted that our readers are informed of the geological wealth of the Upper Kentucky. If not, a perusal of Dr. Owen's report, or the conversation of any intelli-gent gentleman familiar with the coun-ties in question, will satisfy the most in-credulous. If Pennsylvania coal and iron lands have increased in value from a few cents to hundreds of dollars per acre within the memory of men still young— dependent all the while for transportation facilities chiefly upon railways—it is not too much to assume, for Kentucly lands, a very great appreciation if provided with a very great appreciation, if provided with that cheapest of all highways—a naviga-ble river, controlled and regulated by slack water improvements, alike against freshets and droutles.

If we suppose the average value of lands, in the five counties referred to, to be enhanced to $5 per acre—the most moderate of assumptions, since Estill al-ready rates at $5.45—the revenue of the State will, at present rate of taxation, amount to $25,965.44, an increase of $19. $45.69 over the revenue for 1859. And this increased revenue, considered as in-terest, would represent a safe investment by the State of $330,818. If we may yeuure to predict an increased land valua-ion sufficient to bring these counties up to the general State average, in 1859— $10 33 per acre—and compute the State revenue, it will be found to amount to $59.848 79, representing the interest of $397.479 48.

$197,479 98. In this computation no account is taken of the accretion of property in the shape of furnaces, mills, machinery, dwellings, and the luxuries and comforts of life. Could these be estimated, even approximately, and combined with the many streams of profit to the State and to indistreams of profit to the State and to indi-viduals, they would form a current of con-viction that would sweep away all doubt. We are of those who believe that the real prosperity of any part of our State or country will enhance the prosperity of every part. The birth of manufacturing and mining interests in Kentucky will, we are sure, promote the welfare of the agriculturist as well as the mechanic. But we have purposely viewed the subject of the Kentucky river improvement from a different and (to some) less objectionable point of view. And we believe that figures ar us 1 tot in the assertion that the Stat can, with economy and wisdom, aid the improvement of its chief river by advancing any sum between the limits we have calculated—$130,818 and $297,479 98.

HUNKESS WAS DEISK. There was more done yes-tedday at the city wharf than for the previous three weeks. The maliboats resumed their trips, the Lytle concing down with a full load, and the Inited States leaving here with a good trip. The herryboats have all resumed their regular trips, the boats that have been ice-bound pushed out for their destinations, and things are fast resuming their usual looks about the levee. At Portland the Wild Wagoner was discharging and the Henry Anses receiving freight, and thut zave an air of the Wild Wagoner was discharging and the Henry Ames receiving freight, and that gave an air of life to that landing. A large quantity of freight was moving down Portland a venue.

THE TARASCON, Captain A. T. Gilmore, is the list one of the Hemlerson packets to leave since the commencement of the lee blockade. It is not yet allegether certain that the shore lee will permit the noat to make all the way landings, but she will leave and do the best she can. The Tarascon carries the mails and the Adams Express nackwill leave and do the best she can. The Tarascon carries the mails and the Adams Express packages, and is truly a superh stemmer, baying very elegant calon and state room accommodations, and provided in a truly splendid manner for the comfort of passengers. Captain Gilmore, who commands this steamer, is very widely known as a competent officer. It is a pleasure to travel with life, because he makes it his special study to render a trip on his fleet hoat an enjoyable adair to travelers, and adds to this the most urbane and travelers, and adds to this the most urbane and genial temperament.
